

In the following diagrams, we detail the basic data structure of the program. Each class contains its own menu commands, which are listed and will be implemented in the main menu. Additionally, each class will have getter and setter methods for each of its private data types, which will be used to actuate the menu commands on a data file loaded in by the user.

